Copies of Executive Order No. 10690, dated 22 April 1953, and Executive Order No. 10731, dated 29 April 1953, are being issued in cased form to the Commandant, United States Army Forces in Alaska, and the following units:

1. New Idria Air Defense Battalion
2. 18th Portable Hospital Battalion (Alaska) (part)
3. 1st Battalion, Artillery Regiment (Alaska) (part)
4. 1st Battalion, Armor Cavalry (Alaska) (part)
5. 1st Battalion, Infantry Regiment (Alaska) (part)
6. 1st Battalion, Medical Regiment (Alaska) (part)
7. 1st Battalion, Parachute Infantry Regiment (Alaska) (part)
8. 1st Battalion, Service Battalion (Alaska) (part)
9. 1st Battalion, Signal Battalion (Alaska) (part)
10. 1st Battalion, Supply Company (Alaska) (part)
11. Battalion, 82d (Joint) Assault Mortar Company
12. Battalion, 82d (Joint) Mortar Company
13. Direct Photo Unit & Civil Patrol Section
14. General Services Unit
15. Headquarters, 82d Parachute Infantry Regiment

These units, organized as a base force, shall remain unassisted by extraneous battalions and supporting organizations of duty in Alaska, and shall be maintained at a minimum strength. The force was directed to assist the commandant in all his functions of command, control, and supervision of the forces assigned to him. A large, diversified and functional army, strongly interested in maneuver and mobility, was required to meet the needs of Alaska. It was necessary to have a force which could be rapidly concentrated, disengaging and independently fortified positions. The small steps, plus the ability to move rapidly, were designed to meet the requirements of Alaska. The force was to be supplied with mobile equipment, with resultant variable air currents, and addition and previous both with the ability to move rapidly, was designed to meet the requirements of Alaska. The approach by sea, through certain major ports, was to be avoided.
